Chicago Industrial Market

The Chicago Industrial Market saw leasing demand stay strong despite vacancy remaining stagnant at 5.9%. Net absorption witnessed a sharp decline due to the amount of new product hitting the market, with much of it remaining vacant. Following several quarters of strong construction activity, there was a sharp decrease year-over-year, with 10.2 msf currently under construction—down 44% from the second quarter of 2017. Overall asking net rental rates remained relatively unchanged at $4.37 psf. Transactional volume recorded a -47.5% dip year-over-year, currently recorded at $604.5 million.

Trends To Watch

Labor: Labor has become an increasingly important factor in site selection, primarily in markets where there is more intense competition between users.

Spec Construction: Speculative construction remains active across the Chicago market, with only 16% of projects currently under construction over 200,000 sf being delivered as build-to-suit. Some markets such as the I-80 and I-55 Corridors are beginning to oversaturate with vacant speculative buildings.

Single Loading Buildings: Developers have been maximizing building efficiency by adding loading docks to only one side of the buildings and adding additional trailer parking.
